On September 26, the King of Saudi Arabia signed a royal decree granting women the “right” to drive. The kingdom was one of the last governments in the world to enforce a ban on female drivers. Courageous activists like Manal al-Sharif, leader of the Women2Drive campaign, played a decisive role in pressuring the government to change its policy. HRF has supported Manal’s work even before she was well known. We began by giving her a platform at our Oslo Freedom Forum to talk about how women are treated like slaves in her country, and she told us about her dream for Saudi women to one day be able to drive. As she often says, “the rain starts with a single drop,” and in her vision, the right to drive is one step toward full political freedom.

The attention Manal received through HRF led to many new opportunities: main-stage talks at the Oslo Freedom Forum and TED that attracted millions of views; fellowships and prizes; an opportunity to write a memoir, “Daring to Drive,” which was chosen by Oprah as her top summer read; and most recently, the Saturday profile in The New York Times. Manal exemplifies the kind of individual that HRF supports — someone who uses her experiences to speak out for human rights. We began by giving her a platform at our Oslo Freedom Forum to talk about how women are treated like slaves in her country, and she told us about her dream for Saudi women to one day be able to drive. As she often says, “the rain starts with a single drop,” and in her view, the right to drive is one step toward full political freedom.

The conventional wisdom is that 2017 was a tumultuous year, an annus horribilis full of scandals, disasters, and a negative trend that we can only hope to reverse in 2018. It’s not just my contrarian nature that makes me want to push back against this dismal narrative: I am not going to deny there have been many challenges and outright disasters in the past year, of course. After all, the first step in making things better is to make an honest evaluation. There are, however, plenty of silver linings to be found, as well as some inarguably positive developments.

I’m optimistic because there is no benefit to being otherwise! Believing in positive change, and taking action to create it, is how we get others to accompany our efforts and make it real. This is also true in tech, where I believe strongly in the self-fulfilling prophecy of our innovations like artificial intelligence — or, as is more accurate in many cases, augmented intelligence.

In my TED Talk and at DefCon I spoke about the need for more tech disruption, not less, so that we can stay ahead of our machines by coming up with more challenges, more things we don’t know how to do. I also used these opportunities to bring the tech community into the struggle for human rights. HRF’s new Tech and Liberty program recognizes that tech isn’t good or evil, but agnostic, and thereby create better humans, not just smarter machines. This year of hard work has taught us many hard lessons. Let 2018 be the year we apply them.

LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

LETTER FROM THE CHAIRMAN
MISSION

THE HUMAN RIGHTS FOUNDATION (HRF) IS A NONPARTISAN NONPROFIT ORGANIZATION THAT PROMOTES AND PROTECTS HUMAN RIGHTS GLOBALLY, WITH A FOCUS ON CLOSED SOCIETIES.

HRF UNITES PEOPLE IN THE COMMON CAUSE OF DEFENDING HUMAN RIGHTS AND PROMOTING LIBERAL DEMOCRACY. OUR MISSION IS TO ENSURE THAT FREEDOM IS BOTH PRESERVED AND PROMOTED AROUND THE WORLD.

WE FOCUS OUR WORK ON THE FOUNDING IDEALS OF THE HUMAN RIGHTS MOVEMENT, THOSE MOST PURELY REPRESENTED IN THE 1976 INTERNATIONAL COVENANT ON CIVIL AND POLITICAL RIGHTS (ICCPR).

HRF BELIEVES THAT ALL HUMAN BEINGS ARE ENTITLED TO:

- FREEDOM OF SELF-DETERMINATION
- FREEDOM FROM ARBITRARY DETAINMENT OR EXILE
- FREEDOM FROM INTERFERENCE AND COERCION IN MATTERS OF CONSCIENCE
- FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION
- FREEDOM FROM SLAVERY AND TORTURE
- THE RIGHT TO WORSHIP IN THE MANNER OF THEIR CHOOSING
- THE RIGHT TO ACQUIRE AND DISPOSE OF PROPERTY
- THE RIGHT TO EQUAL TREATMENT AND DUE PROCESS UNDER LAW
- THE RIGHT TO LEAVE AND ENTER THEIR COUNTRY
- THE RIGHT TO BE ABLE TO PARTICIPATE IN THE GOVERNMENT OF THEIR COUNTRIES
GLOBAL GUIDES FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

YOUR HUMAN RIGHTS GUIDES ARE TAILORED FOR LOCAL AUDIENCES AND WRITTEN IN LOCAL LANGUAGES TO GIVE PERSONS LIVING IN CLOSED SOCIETIES CRUCIAL INFORMATION ABOUT THEIR INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY, FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION, AND PRIVACY.

The guides include simple explanations, aided by pictures and examples, to illustrate rights violations. Each guide is written and curated in collaboration with local NGOs and civil society leaders, and contains key information on cultural context and regional laws.

In 2017, HRF expanded this unique program by creating and distributing guides in Zimbabwe, Nicaragua, Equatorial Guinea, and Cambodia, bringing the total number of countries reached by HRF to 14. Our goal is nothing less than one guide for every dictatorship and competitive authoritarian state.
HRF’s Center for Law and Democracy engages in legal advocacy and promotes legal scholarship in comparative constitutional law and international law. Spearheaded by a full-time team of five international lawyers, HRF’s analysis and advocacy work in 2017 continued to focus on those who are not able to legally protest or criticize their governments. In 2017, HRF authored four successful appeals to the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention. At the end of each litigation, the Working Group found in favor of HRF’s claims and issued long legal opinions declaring that the detentions in question had been arbitrary and in violation of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The cases won by HRF set important precedents protecting individual rights in closed societies, and can help future democratic governments in these countries determine how best to offer reparations to thousands of victims. The decisions also expose the unlawful actions of tyrants and increase the pressure on dictatorships to release political prisoners.

In April 2017, HRF’s legal team submitted an amicus curiae brief before the European Court of Human Rights on behalf of a dissident in Azerbaijan. The dissident was first convicted after allegations were made that she had participated in a video where she danced while mocking the government of Azerbaijan. The European Court’s ruling is still pending and we expect it in the first half of 2018.

Aside from these high-profile findings, HRF’s Center for Law and Democracy also issued more than sixty position statements criticizing authoritarian regimes for their abuses, and drawing attention to more than 190 cases that often go unreported or underreported. These included condemnations of the persecution of minority groups in Chechnya, deeming the mass killings of Rohingya in Burma a “genocide,” and rallying support for jailed democracy leaders in Cuba.
Evon Mawarire, the leader of the #ThisFlag protest movement, is on Free Speech Unlimited’s website as the illustrative case from Zimbabwe. After Mawarire was arbitrarily arrested in February 2017, HRF filed an individual complaint to the U.N. on his behalf, and continued to update the U.N. on his case after he was arrested again in September 2017. In November 2017, the U.N. ruled, in response to an HRF legal petition, that Mawarire had indeed been arrested arbitrarily, violating his rights to free expression and peaceful assembly, and urged the Zimbabwean government to compensate him for his wrongful imprisonment. Evan Mawarire became a member of HRF’s community of activists, spoke at the Oslo Freedom Forum in May 2017, and played a leading role in Zimbabwe’s peaceful protests against Robert Mugabe in December 2017.

Free Speech Unlimited is a legal research project that analyzes domestic legal systems from countries around the world and assesses their compliance with international law’s most protective standards for the right to freedom of expression.

In 2017, HRF found that its assessment of free speech laws around the world corroborated the hypothesis that differences in the enforcement of official defamation and incitement laws correlate to regime type. In other words, there is a noticeable and informative difference between fully liberal democratic, competitive authoritarian, and fully authoritarian regimes (see page 19 for more information).

Throughout the year, HRF also continued to update and improve an online, interactive map that makes the findings of Free Speech Unlimited available to the general public, to academics, and, most importantly, to activists that can benefit from knowing how their countries adjudicate free speech cases. The website is projected to be a permanent educational resource that allows users to collaborate to update the map’s information on international and domestic laws in the world’s 193 countries. Free Speech Unlimited has also brought cases to HRF’s attention, leading our lawyers to provide crucial legal aid to arbitrarily imprisoned dissidents around the world.

Center for Law and Democracy lawyers also used the research from Free Speech Unlimited to provide expertise on panels at conferences in Brussels, Prague, Washington, D.C., and New York City. In July, at the New York City Bar Association, HRF Chief Legal Officer Javier El-Hage gave a presentation on the global persecution of judges and lawyers in places from Cuba to Saudi Arabia.
Both used the opportunity to draw attention to the scourge of authoritarianism, urging members of congress to promote the rights of individuals living under dictatorship.

During his testimony before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, Kasparov stated:

“People living under dictatorships want the opportunity for freedom, the opportunity to live in peace and to follow their dreams.” From the “Arab Spring to the current battles for liberty from Venezuela to Eastern Ukraine, people are fighting for that opportunity, giving up their lives for freedom.”

A few months later, Halvorssen spoke to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary about the Washington-based firm Fusion GPS. Halvorssen described the firm’s work on behalf of criminals from the Venezuelan regime whereby Fusion GPS organized a wide-ranging smear campaign against several journalists and whistleblowers trying to draw attention to corruption in Venezuela.

Halvorssen’s testimony attracted wide-ranging media coverage everywhere from Business Insider to The New York Post, and numerous appearances on national television, including “Tucker Carlson Tonight,” the highest rated cable news show, with 2.5 million viewers.

DEFINING REGIME TYPE

DEMOCRATIC REGIMES largely respect the rule of law and the separation of powers. They allow citizens to exercise their civil and political rights vibrantly in a context of electoral competition. As a result, among the pillars of liberal democracy are the respect for freedom of speech and the freedom of the press; free and fair elections; an independent judiciary; and a civil society that is not afraid to criticize the government and participate in politics.

COMPETITIVE AUTHORITARIAN REGIMES have judiciaries that are controlled tightly by the executive branch, so their authoritarian rulers get away with asphyxiating civil society, usually through the curtailment of independent media, opposition political parties and government criticism. This results in an uneven yet periodic political contest between the regime and beleaguered opposition forces where it becomes harder and harder for power to change hands democratically.

FULLY AUTHORITARIAN REGIMES are the stereotypical dictatorships that monopolize political life and impose decisions by force. Under these regimes, there is no degree of true electoral competition. True elections in dictatorships are nonexistent. Single-party façade electoral contests might be held, or the regime might allow parties that do not represent authentic opposition to participate.

POLITICAL REGIME CLASSIFICATION

IN ORDER TO FULFILL OUR MISSION TO PROMOTE FREEDOM AND DEMOCRACY “WITH A FOCUS ON CLOSED SOCIETIES,” HRF’S CENTER FOR LAW AND DEMOCRACY HAS DEVELOPED A CLASSIFICATION SYSTEM TO CATEGORIZE ALL COUNTRIES IN THE WORLD INTO DEMOCRATIC, COMPETITIVE AUTHORITARIAN, AND FULLY AUTHORITARIAN STATES

The research project, which takes its lead from definitions provided by Harvard University Professor Steven Levitsky and Toronto University professor Lucan A. Way, is in its early stages and has not yet been published, but its initial findings have allowed HRF to prove that authoritarianism affects more than half of humanity, making it perhaps the greatest challenge facing the world today.

According to HRF’s numbers, the world currently has 109 democratic regimes, which account for just 47% of the world’s population, or over 3.5 billion people; 40 competitive authoritarian regimes, which account for 16% or almost 1.2 billion people; and 53 full-fledged dictatorships, which account for 37% or 2.8 billion people.

HRF’s political regime classification project started as a document for internal use, but more recently has drawn wider attention from academics and news outlets like The Economist and The Los Angeles Times. In the future, HRF hopes to develop the project into a more comprehensive index that can serve as a tool for consultation by academics and activists around the world. (Our ideal would be to subject the index to quarterly review.)
FULLY AUTHORITARIAN REGIMES 37% (53 COUNTRIES) - 2.8 BILLION PEOPLE
COMPETITIVE AUTHORITARIAN REGIMES 16% (40 COUNTRIES) - 1.2 BILLION PEOPLE
DEMOCRATIC REGIMES 47% (109 COUNTRIES) - 3.5 BILLION PEOPLE
(SEE PAGE 19 FOR REGIME TYPE DEFINITIONS.)
TECHNOLOGY & LIBERTY
HRF’s Tech and Liberty program connects technologists to activists, giving them the skills and resources they need to advance their work and protect themselves online. Much as scientists played a key role as thought leaders bringing about the collapse of the Soviet Union, technologists are essential to challenging authoritarian regimes today.

In 2017, HRF collaborated with tech leaders in workshops and on panels at prominent technology conferences around the world. In particular, HRF worked with Silicon Valley’s think tank Singularity University (SU), a powerful community of technologists who aim to solve humankind’s biggest problems. HRF moderated a panel on citizen-driven innovation at SU’s flagship event in San Francisco, and was able to introduce a handful of activists to some of the world’s top minds at SU’s Global Solutions Program at their NASA campus in Mountain View. HRF Chief Strategy Officer Alex Gladstein spoke at SU’s South Africa Summit, giving him the opportunity to tell 1,300 business leaders about the role technology can play in the human rights movement.

Similarly, HRF brought human rights issues to the Mozilla Festival, the WIRED Business Conference, Blockchain for Social Impact, events at Silicon Valley Bank, Sneakercon, and more. HRF organized a hackathon at Still Hacking Anyway and led a panel during Oslo Innovation Week on how emerging technology can advance freedom. HRF leaders Garry Kasparov and Thor Halvorssen addressed technologists in keynote speeches at DEF CON, SXSW, and TEDx events, among others.

Meanwhile, HRF has built upon relationships with tech companies like Google and Twitter by introducing them to activists at Oslo Freedom Forum events. At our Tech Labs, organizations like Twitter, the Bifury Group, ConsenSys, Yubico, the Electronic Frontier Foundation, Sourcefabric, and more hosted hands-on workshop sessions on best practices for activists, and offered advice to attendees at expo-style booths.

Through these interactions and collaborations, HRF is focusing the tech world’s attention on the struggle for freedom and ensuring that its key players are paying attention to civil liberties as they design our future society.
DISRUPT NORTH KOREA
FLASH DRIVES FOR FREEDOM

The North Korean dictatorship maintains its hold on power by tightly controlling the flow of information into the country, keeping its population in the dark about current events and world history. Flash Drives for Freedom is an HRF program that aims to counter the Kim regime’s censorship by collecting flash drives; filling them with media, educational materials, and information; and sending them into North Korea.

In 2017, HRF obtained more than 100,000 flash drives and will finish sending them into the country in 2018. This presents enormous growth from 2016, when no more than 10,000 flash drives were sent into North Korea by HRF and other organizations.

When North Korean citizens gain access to knowledge from the outside world, it can lead them to question Kim Jong-un’s leadership. An estimated 1.1 million North Koreans have viewed media and books sent into the country by flash drive. Flash drives have brought 48 million hours of reading materials and 2 million hours of footage past censors. By increasing the sheer number of flash drives in North Korea, HRF aims to flood the market and make foreign materials more accessible to any North Korean that wants them.

In 2017, Flash Drives for Freedom traveled to conferences around the world, introducing human rights concerns in North Korea to new people in diverse industries. The campaign traveled to SXSW in Austin, Texas; RightsCon in Brussels, Belgium; The Guardian’s Changing Media Summit in London, England; Accelerate Good Global in San Francisco, California; DEF CON in Las Vegas, Nevada; and more. HRF has also presented its North Korea work during seminars at Cornell University and St. Louis University, and through a series of presentations to social clubs in San Diego, Los Angeles, Phoenix, and Seattle.

Ambassador Thae Yong-ho, the highest-ranking diplomat ever to defect from North Korea, spoke at the Oslo Freedom Forum in May 2017. He used the opportunity to tell the story of his dramatic escape from the North Korean embassy in London, and used the OFF platform to explain that information — not military intervention — is the key to liberating North Koreans.

Ambassador Thae gave an enthusiastic endorsement to HRF’s North Korea program and effusively thanked HRF for being early and significant investors in the efforts to liberate North Korea using information.

In early November, he brought this message to the U.S. Congress in a testimony that asked the U.S. to join efforts to send information into North Korea.

"Until now, the North Korean system has prevailed through an effective and credible reign of terror and by almost perfectly preventing the free-flow of outside information," he said in his testimony. "We cannot change the policy of terror of the Kim Jong-un regime, but we can educate the North Korean population to stand up by disseminating outside information." The ambassador called truth “the Achilles’ heel of Kim Jong-un.”
North Korean defector Yeonmi Park tells SXSW attendees about Flash Drives for Freedom. Flash drives donated by HRF to the defector-led organization No Chain. The defector-led organization No Chain sends donated drives into North Korea by launching water bottles into ocean currents. A balloon launch to send technology and information into North Korea.

Flash Drives for Freedom continues to receive prominent news coverage from international media.

Economist Films produced an online video about Flash Drives for Freedom that has received more than 2.4 million views. Radio interviews on Radio Free Asia and CBC Canada reached more than 9 million listeners, and NBC aired a segment about the program, featuring interviews from North Korean defector Yeonmi Park and HRF President Thor Halvorssen. The campaign was also recognized by D&AD Impact, which awarded HRF’s campaign its prestigious Wood Pencil Award for using creativity for good.

Flash Drives for Freedom posters are available for purchase on the new online store at flashdrivesforfreedom.org.

Flash Drives for Freedom continues to receive prominent news coverage from international media.

In 2017, HRF hired a North Korean defector to grow the Disrupt North Korea Program. He will conduct fieldwork and research to build our networks among the activist community, particularly in South Korea.
COLLABORATIONS WITH DEFECTORS

AFTER A DECADE OF WORK ON NORTH KOREAN HUMAN RIGHTS, HRF HAS DEVELOPED A DEEP NETWORK IN THE NORTH KOREAN DEFECTOR COMMUNITY, AND CONTINUES TO COLLABORATE WITH ITS MEMBERS

In April, HRF curated an event at the Asia Society in Houston, Texas, with North Korean author Hyeonseo Lee and North Korea information expert Jieun Baek. Hyeonseo defected from North Korea when she was 17 years old, and wrote about her experience in her bestselling memoir, “The Girl with Seven Names.” She has since brought North Korean human rights concerns to the United Nations in several testimonies and conversations with high-level officials. Jieun Baek is a Ph.D. candidate in Public Policy at the University of Oxford and author of the book, “North Korea’s Hidden Revolution: How the Information Underground is Transforming a Closed Society.” She is a definitive source on the impact of outside information on North Korean society.

HRF President Thor Halvorssen and North Korean activist Yeonmi Park co-authored an article published in The Wall Street Journal drawing attention to the cruelty of North Korea’s dictatorship. The article urged the new South Korean government administration — which includes appeasers and even admirers of North Korea in its ranks — to support North Korean human rights.

DEAR LEADER

In 2017, HRF continued its collaboration with the sunglasses company DEAR LEADER. DEAR LEADER aims to break the association between the phrase “Dear Leader” and North Korea’s cruel tyrant, Kim Jong-un. For every pair of sunglasses sold, the company donates a portion of the proceeds to HRF’s Disrupt North Korea program. DEAR LEADER presented its work at multiple HRF events in 2017, and the collaboration with HRF has won media coverage in news outlets like Fox News and NowThis. See page 59 to learn about a new collaboration between HRF and DEAR LEADER.

HRF’S OSLO FREEDOM FORUM (OFF) BRINGS ACTIVISTS TOGETHER WITH PHILANTHROPISTS, POLICYMAKERS, JOURNALISTS, TECHNOLOGISTS, ARTISTS, BUSINESS LEADERS, AND MANY OTHERS TO COLLABORATE ON SOLVING PRESSING HUMAN RIGHTS ISSUES.

OFF popularizes the struggle for human rights by elevating democracy and dictatorship to the international agenda, and assists activists by presenting them with new opportunities and resources to advance their work.

The 2017 Oslo Freedom Forum, held in Norway, featured talks by 24 speakers, including the highest-ranking member of the North Korean government to defect, Thae Yong-ho; former Maldivian President Mohamed Nasheed; democracy analyst and Pulitzer Prize winner Anne Applebaum; Rohingya activist Wai Wai Nu; and Secretary-General of the Organization of American States Luis Almagro. The Prime Minister of Norway, Erna Solberg, gave the keynote address, in which she enthusiastically told the OFF community that their struggle was shared with the government of Norway.

Manal al-Sharif joined the OFF community in 2012, shortly after a video of her driving in Saudi Arabia went viral. OFF gave Manal countless valuable connections and resources, and an international platform from which she could tell the world about how women are second-class citizens in her country. Five years later, Manal’s campaign for women’s rights scored a major victory: in September 2017, the king of Saudi Arabia signed a royal decree granting women the right to drive.
On September 19, HRF hosted the first-ever Oslo Freedom Forum in New York (OFFinNY) at Lincoln Center. The event gathered more than 750 attendees, 80% of whom had never attended an Oslo Freedom Forum event. Speakers like Iranian activist Marina Nemat, Russia civil society organizer Vladmir Kara-Murza, and Pakistani squash star Maria Toorpakai Wazir gave courageous talks about pressing human rights concerns, and a surprise performance by dissident violinist Wuilly Arteaga drew critical attention to authoritarian abuse, even as the U.N. General Assembly convened most of the world’s dictators just two miles away. We were in the West and they were on the East side—a fitting analogy.

At the opening press conference hosted by Norway’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs, HRF President Thor Halvorssen reiterated the importance of defending individual rights where they are most at risk, and urged the U.N. to act: “The United Nations, once established to bring peace and freedom to the world, is a place where dictatorships have an outsized influence. It has not only arguably lost utility for the individuals at this table but it is largely now a tool for their oppressors. At the Oslo Freedom Forum we are building a different kind of community. Transparent, courageous, informed, effective. There are disruptors of all kinds in our community – entrepreneurs, investigative journalists, protest organizers, investors, revolutionaries, whistleblowers. We are here with a dizzying array of individuals who aren’t satisfied with the world around them and want to make a difference. Taken together, there is an enormous amount of practical experience here with regard to changing the world. The Oslo Freedom Forum is an effort to magnify the efforts of these individuals.”

Programming also included the first-ever Impact Breakfast, an intimate gathering that introduced OFF dissidents to leaders in the tech, philanthropy, and business communities who have a special interest in supporting activism. OFFinNY has already produced dozens of new partnerships and media collaborations, winning huge new audiences and new supporters for the dissidents in attendance. OFFinNY side events, like the first Wear Your Values (page 59) exhibition and an Art in Protest (page 57) show highlighted HRF’s efforts to involve new industries in the struggle against authoritarianism.
EDUCATIONAL WORK
In 2017, HRF hosted two CFFs: one at the world-renowned Universidad Francisco Marroquín (CFF at UFM) in Guatemala, and one at the Universidad del Rosario (CFF at UR) in Colombia. At these events, more than 1,500 students were able to engage with democracy leaders from around the world during talks and workshops. Previous iterations were held at University of Colorado at Boulder, Stanford, Tufts, and Yale.

During CFF at UFM, students heard from nonviolence expert Jamila Raqib, Ukrainian anti-corruption activist Yulia Marushevska, Egyptian actor Omar Sharif Jr., Chinese human rights advocate Anastasia Lin, Syrian citizen journalist Abdalaziz Alhamza, and Cuban democracy leader Rosa María Payá.

CFF at UR focused on encouraging students to develop civil society in Colombia and engage in democratic reform after the country’s controversial peace accords. Students learned from Rosa María Payá, Abdalaziz Alhamza, and Yulia Marushevska, as well as human rights lawyer Kimberley Motley and drug policy expert Lisa Sánchez. This event reached the broader Colombian community through event coverage and a series of profiles published in El Tiempo.
Each year, HRF works to engage the next generation of human rights leaders through our Oslo Scholars program. Through this initiative, OFF speakers connect with university students from around the world, meeting them in Oslo and mentoring them during a two-month summer project. This program encourages young leaders to learn about, and become involved with, the global struggle for freedom.

In 2017, HRF paired students from McGill University and Tufts University with speakers like Serbian nonviolence expert Srdja Popovic and Bahraini anti-torture activist Nada Dhaif. The 2017 Scholars spent their summer working with activists everywhere from Libya to South Korea. HRF also partnered with Students for Liberty and the Norwegian investment firm Kistefos to enable more students to participate in the Oslo Freedom Forum.

“WORDS SIMPLY CANNOT ENCOMPASS MY APPRECIATION FOR THE OPPORTUNITY TO ATTEND THE OSLO FREEDOM FORUM. THIS EXPERIENCE GAVE ME AN INCOMPARABLY DEEP UNDERSTANDING OF SOME OF THE STRUGGLES FACED BY PEOPLE AROUND THE WORLD, AND THE LENGTHS THEY HAVE GONE TO AND CONTINUE TO GO TO IN SEARCH OF IMPROVING THE LIVES OF THEIR PEERS AND FUTURE GENERATIONS. EVEN MORE POWERFUL WAS THE PRONOUNCED EMPATHY AND HUMAN CONNECTION FELT THROUGHOUT THE FORUM. WITH EACH SPEECH I HEARD, WORKSHOP I ATTENDED, OR CONVERSATION I HELD, I FELT AS THOUGH MY WORLDVIEW AND PERSPECTIVE WAS EXPANDED AND STRETCHED IN NEW DIRECTIONS.”

Jasleen Ashta, 2017 Oslo Scholar

“THIS WAS MY FIRST YEAR ATTENDING AND I AM EXTREMELY HAPPY WITH ALL I EXPERIENCED. I HAVE ACQUIRED EXTENSIVE KNOWLEDGE ABOUT THE IMPORTANCE OF FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND OF HOW TO USE TECHNOLOGY TO SHAPE A BETTER, MORE EQUAL WORLD. FURTHER, I CAN ONLY SAY HOW MANY INTERESTING TALKS I HAVE HAD DURING THE GATHERING AND MEALS. ATTENDING THE DINNERS AND OVER THE SOCIAL TALKS, I LEARNED THAT SO MANY GREAT PEOPLE FROM DIFFERENT COUNTRIES WORK AND PUSH FOR THE SAME GOALS. ONE OF THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS NETWORK IS THAT AFTER THE CONFERENCE YOU STAY IN TOUCH WITH PEOPLE AND CAN GET ADVICE IF EVER YOU NEED SUPPORT.”

Seyran Khalili, 2017 Kistefos Scholar

INTERNSHIPS

THROUGHOUT THE YEAR, HRF AND THE OSLO FREEDOM FORUM OFFER PAID INTERNSHIPS WITH FLEXIBLE SCHEDULES TO STUDENTS IN NEW YORK AND AROUND THE WORLD. THESE POSITIONS ALLOW YOUNG PEOPLE TO ENGAGE IN HUMAN RIGHTS WORK AND GAIN HANDS-ON EXPERIENCE IN THE NONPROFIT WORLD
POPULARIZING HUMAN RIGHTS
VA CLAV HAVEL INTERNATIONAL PRIZE FOR CREATIVE DISSERT

THE HAVEL PRIZE recognizes individuals who, with bravery and ingenuity, unmask the lie of dictatorship by living in truth. Past laureates include Saudi women's rights activist Manal al-Sharif, Chinese artist Ai Weiwei, Russian punk protest group Pussy Riot, North Korean democracy activist Park Sang Hak, and Iranian cartoonist Atena Farghadani.
IN MAY, HRF AWARDED THE 2017 PRIZE TO BAHRAINI POET AAYAT ALQORMOZI, ZIMBABWEAN PLAYWRIGHT SILVANOS MUZDVOVA, AND VENEZUELAN SATIRICAL NEWS OUTLET EL CHIGÜIRE BIPOLAR. THE PRIZE INCLUDES A GRANT OF 350,000 NORWEGIAN KRONER SPLIT AMONG THE RECIPIENTS TO FURTHER THEIR WORK, AND IS AWARDED AT A CEREMONY DURING THE OSLO FREEDOM FORUM.

After reading about the Havel Prize, the organizer of Australia’s Chaser Lecture, Julian Morrow, reached out to HRF staff to inquire about a partnership. As a result, this year’s Chaser Lecture, an event that celebrates excellence in satire and donates its proceeds to charity, recognized El Chigüire Bipolar and supported HRF. Past laureates have included OFF speaker Bassem Youssef and Havel Prize Laureate Sakdiyah Ma’ruf.

Silvanos Mudzvova is a Zimbabwean actor, playwright, and activist known for challenging the country’s dictatorship in daring theatrical productions. Silvanos has directed several controversial performances including “The Final Push,” a political satire; “Missing Diamonds, I Need My Share,” a play on corruption in the diamond industry; and “Protest Revolutionaries,” a play that encourages Zimbabweans to plan their own Arab Spring. Silvanos has been detained and arrested several times. To avoid government persecution, Silvanos now performs what he calls “hit-and-run” performances in public spaces.

El Chigüire Bipolar is a Venezuelan satirical media project created in 2008 by Elio Casale, Oswaldo Graziani, and Juan Andrés Ravell. The website, most famous for mocking former Venezuelan president Hugo Chávez, is often described as a mix of the Onion and John Oliver’s Last Week Tonight. El Chigüire Bipolar’s popularity in Venezuela grows as the government increases pressure on independent news outlets.

Aayat Alqormozi is a Bahraini poet who uses her craft to advocate for the equal rights of Shi’ite and Sunni Muslims, and to express her opposition to Bahrain’s monarchy. In 2011, Aayat recited poetry during a protest at Pearl Square as a part of the Bahraini uprising. In response, she was expelled from university and imprisoned for “insulting the King and encouraging hatred of the ruling regime.” Nevertheless, Aayat’s poetry and peaceful defiance have made her a symbol of resistance against the al-Khalifa regime.
Authoritarian regimes, such as those in China, Cuba, Russia, and Saudi Arabia, regularly harass, jail, and even kill artists for work that threatens their hold on power. Meanwhile, the artists who are the targets of these attacks often do not have the resources or recognition to push back. This new program builds on HRF’s work fostering a global community of artists and providing them with financial backing, international partnerships, writing and cataloguing services, and other support to continue their important work.

In 2017, Art in Protest curated three exhibits featuring Afghan graffiti artist Shamsia Hassani, North Korean painter Song Byeok, Italian-Venezuelan artist Rodrigo Figueredo, and Faces of Defiance, a photography exhibit shot by Jason Ashwood that features portraits of FGM survivors, among others.

The first show, in April, featured work by the Cuban graffiti artist Danilo “El Sexto” Maldonado Machado, who was released from prison earlier in the year thanks to legal assistance from HRF. The exhibit, “Angels and Demons,” showcased El Sexto’s portraits of well-known historical figures who have suffered for their principles. On opening night, El Sexto entered a replica of the maximum security cell where he was once jailed and staged a hunger strike in solidarity with artists who remain in prison around the world.

Art in Protest also curated exhibits during Oslo Freedom Forum events in May and September. In the next year, the program will launch new initiatives, including an artist residency program.
FASHION FOR FREEDOM

In 2017, HRF made a concerted effort to bring human rights issues to an expanded set of industries. The fashion industry is the third largest economy in the world, and its leaders have great sway over popular culture.

New collaborations had two goals: first, to use fashion as a vehicle to draw attention to human rights concerns in closed societies, and second, to encourage brands to address human rights concerns in their own supply chains.

IN 2018, DEAR LEADER WILL LAUNCH ITS NEW FREEDOM COLLECTION, A LINE OF SUNGLASSES INSPIRED BY HUMAN RIGHTS ACTIVISTS THAT HAVE PRESENTED AT THE OSLO FREEDOM FORUM. THE PROJECT REPRESENTS A NEW WAY TO POPULARIZE HUMAN RIGHTS THROUGH THE FASHION INDUSTRY.

To read more about HRF’s work with Dear Leader, see page 33.
WEAR YOUR VALUES

IN SEPTEMBER, HRF PRODUCED A FASHION SHOW DURING NEW YORK FASHION WEEK TO DRAW ATTENTION TO BRANDS THAT ARE COMMITTED TO IMPROVING HUMAN RIGHTS

Wear Your Values attracted more than 400 guests, who explored an interactive exhibit that highlighted ways to improve rights at every link in the fashion supply chain, from harvesting materials to branding. Guests participated in live-crafting sessions, walked through fields via VR headset, stamped their own textiles, tried on ethically-sourced garments, and more.

The event was produced in collaboration with Remake and with support from Cordes Foundation, Arzu, Chaddock, Slow Factory, Design and Flow, There Is No Limit Foundation, Nest, Raw Spirit, and other leaders in ethical fashion. The event gave guests insight into the lives of workers who create our clothes, many of whom live in authoritarian countries with no ability to assemble or speak freely.
IN 2017, HRF REIMAGINED ITS RUSSIA NEWSLETTER, NOW CALLED THE RUSSIA DOWNLOAD. THIS NEWSLETTER, WHICH HIGHLIGHTS IMPORTANT NEWS ON RUSSIA’S RIGHTS ABUSES AND INFLUENCE AROUND THE WORLD, REACHES SOME OF THE WORLD’S TOP POLICYMAKERS AND JOURNALISTS.

IN A WORLD WHERE PUTIN CONTROLS THE NARRATIVE ABOUT WHAT’S HAPPENING INSIDE RUSSIA, THIS PROGRAM IS INCREASINGLY IMPORTANT TO KEEP INFLUENCERS INFORMED ON THE TRUTH.

TO DATE, HRF HAS SENT MORE THAN 150 DIGESTS, INCLUDING MORE THAN 1,000 ARTICLES, AND IN OCTOBER 2017, THE NEWSLETTER RE-LAUNCHED WITH A NEW DESIGN AND FORMAT GIVING READERS MORE CONTEXT ON THE LINKED ARTICLES.
2017 MEDIA IMPACT

PART OF HRF’S MISSION IS TO BRING THE STRUGGLE FOR FREEDOM TO LARGER AUDIENCES BY ENCOURAGING COVERAGE OF HUMAN RIGHTS IN MAINSTREAM NEWS OUTLETS

In 2017, HRF garnered more than 4,800 significant media appearances, not including the 840 profiles, in-depth articles, and event reviews that resulted from the 2017 Oslo Freedom Forum and the Oslo Freedom Forum in New York. This represents a 22% growth from the previous year, and includes articles in The New York Times, The Economist, Business Insider, WIRED, Reuters, AFP, Verdens Gang, El País, and more.

HRF also increased its efforts to publish original op-eds in highly-read print media. HRF President Thor Halvorssen and Chairman Garry Kasparov kicked off 2017 with a hard-hitting op-ed in The Washington Post arguing that authoritarianism is the greatest challenge facing humanity. Halvorssen also co-published a Wall Street Journal piece with OFF Speaker Yeonmi Park urging the new South Korean president to push for human rights in North Korea. HRF staff published as well in other outlets with large readership, including The New York Post and The Memo.

At the Oslo Freedom Forum in New York, North Korean defector Ji Seong-ho stepped off stage and went straight into a flurry of interviews with journalists moved by his story. One interview clip with Business Insider quickly went viral, bringing Ji Seong-ho’s appeal for support of North Korean human rights to more than 600,000 viewers.

Online video grew exponentially in 2017, and HRF met this trend by partnering with social media news organizations, garnering millions of views for human rights stories that might otherwise have been lost to the 24-hour news cycle. After attending the 2017 Oslo Freedom Forum, Economist Films released six videos on topics like censorship and women’s equality in Saudi Arabia and Pakistan, accumulating more than 5 million views. A video feature on NowThis, one of the largest social media-only news outlets, featured HRF’s collaboration with the sunglasses company DEAR LEADER (page 34 and 38) and racked up more than 2 million views in the first 24 hours. The Young Turks produced a live show at the 2017 Oslo Freedom Forum and filmed live backstage during the Oslo Freedom Forum in New York, broadcasting human rights stories to their millions of followers on Facebook and YouTube.

Meanwhile, HRF grew its online influence significantly in 2017. HRF’s Twitter follower count grew by 42% to 167,000 followers, while Facebook likes grew by 46% to 23,000 likes. Oslo Freedom Forum accounts saw even more growth, with Facebook growing 73%. This reflects not just an increase in brand awareness, but also how much the HRF and OFF communities grew in 2017.

EXPOSING THE SUPPORTERS OF TYRANNY

HRF STRIVES TO EXPOSE WESTERN SUPPORTS OF TYRANNY, AND DOES SO BY BRINGING HUMAN RIGHTS TOPICS INTO GLOBAL CONVERSATIONS ABOUT POLITICS, SPORTS, AND EVEN POP CULTURE

When we get such a tremendous range of people learning and arguing about corruption and dictatorship, we move the needle.

In 2017, HRF ran several campaigns to expose supporters of dictators. We exposed the Red Bull Athletic Team when it traveled to Venezuela to skydive with the stepchildren and nephews of strongman Nicolás Maduro—all of this arranged by a government contractor, Derwick Associates—even as Venezuelans starved due to shortages and died in protests. CNN followed up on HRF’s expose with a feature story, and Red Bull was forced to leave Venezuela as a result of HRF’s campaign.

In July, HRF called out actor Nicolas Cage for supporting Kazakhstan’s dictatorship after participating in a regime-sponsored film festival. The story won widespread news coverage, including features in Fox News and The Hollywood Reporter, and brought the struggles of the Kazakh people to the international stage.

HRF also shined a spotlight on Turkish autocrat Recep Tayyip Erdogan during his visits to Washington, D.C., and New York City by taking out full-page ads in The Washington Post’s Express, The Washington Times, and Metro NY. The ads, which took over the newspapers’ front pages with the bold title, “You Are Not Welcome,” were highly visible and drew attention to Erdogan’s persecution of journalists, teachers, judges, civil servants, and more in the aftermath of the 2016 coup attempt.
